

Ada Lovelace
12 Analytical Way
London, UK

August 8, 2026

Charles Babbage
Dorset Street
London, UK

Dear Mr. Babbage,

Thank you for the memoir on the Analytical Engine. I have appended a set of notes considerably longer than the original text, in which I set out a method for computing the Bernoulli numbers by machine.

I believe the engine's significance is widely under-appreciated: it does not merely calculate, but manipulates symbols according to rules, and might in principle act upon anything whose relations can be expressed. This letter was itself typeset by a self-healing engine that fetched every package it needed on demand — a small echo of the idea.

I look forward to your thoughts.

With warm regards,

Ada Lovelace

P.S. The full working is enclosed in the accompanying report.